The Review for Job Work

The New Union Bank Building

Work was started this week on the new Union Bank building. It will be built on the lot just west of the J. M. Soby store, and when completed, will be a credit to the town and district. Built of solid brick, two stories high, and a basement the full size of the building with the ground floor entirely devoted to the banking business. There will be space for other banks in the larger cities. The size will be 24x52 and the upper story will be given over to sleeping rooms for the staff. It will be heated throughout and furnished in the most modern style. The basement will extend the full size of the building, and made of concrete. The first floor will be equipped with a safe room, vaults, and will be completed and ready for occupancy by the first of November. This will make Fourth avenue put on a metropolitan appearance, and with the opening of the crossing, become one of the best avenues in town.

I. O. O. F., Installation

Installation of officers of Foothill Lodge No. 13, I. O. O. F., will be held on Saturday evening. All members are on hand. Mr. Cressman, D.D.G.M. of Stavely, was in attendance and assisted by W. A. Lydon, Grand Herald, installed the following officers:

C. W. James, P. G.
J. E. Moffatt, N. G.
W. D. Munro, G.
R. E. McLean, Secy.
O. L. Boimhous, Trusty.
M. A. Lashaw, Warden.
Geo. Stewart, Conductor.
Olin Nelson, Chaplain.

Refreshments were served and a social evening ensued. Several out of town members of the order were present.

NEW Firm In Charge

R. S. Bererton and J. T. Simmons, the partners who bought out the Drayton furniture store arrived on Tuesday and took charge of the business. These gentlemen come well recommended in their line of business and will be prepared in a short time to furnish to the patrons a large and varied line of household goods. While we are sorry to lose Mr. Drayton, we feel assured that the firm of Bererton & Simmons will prove a welcome addition to Claresholm.

It's A Nuisance

There has been considerable talk about the law way in which people are evidently regarding the law in reference to cattle and other stock running at large in the limits of the town. A large amount of time and hard work has been spent to make this year garden more successful than ever before. To have a cattle or horse get in and eat the garden things just as they are large enough to be used on the table, is to say the least, very annoying. A few repeated consignments to the pound might be a good remedy for this ailment and cause careless owners of stock to sit up and take notice, that we have a law covering this nuisance.

Lights Out

Claresholm is having a taste of the old way of lighting, namely the lamp. The boilers at the power house needed re-brickling and a force of masons and assistants are working night and day to complete the job as short a time as possible. It is thought the lights will be turned on the first of next week. The tank was filled before the work started and the water supply will last until about Tuesday of next week.

Messrs. C. J. Braren, O. J. Amundsen and Major Milnes made a trip to Winnipeg the first of the week.

A CREAMERY FOR CLARESHOLM

IS NOW AN ASSURED FACT

Building Operations Will Start At Once.

A creamery for Claresholm, this thoroughly modern, and will cost at least $65,000. This is something that has long been felt to be needed in this locality and as the stock company is formed almost entirely of farmers, the success of the project is assured.

Mixed farming is becoming more general each year. The day of the big rancher is a thing of the past and the progressive farmer has found that the best way of making a living is to be retained by keeping a few head of cattle. The next step is dairying, and for this purpose the creamery is a necessity. We now have the creamery for this district assured, and the farmer can now pass from the beef steer to the dairy cow with increased profits.

ITEMS OF INTEREST TO CLARESHOLM

The Five Miles U.F.A. will meet at the school house on Saturday, July 15th. A program and debate will be provided. Everyone welcome.

Mr. Thos. Moore of St. Clair, Mich, now owner of the "44" made the review a pleasant call and stated his intention of making his home here.

Mr. J. M. Soby took his son Alvin to Calgary for medical treatment Wednesday. The boy has been ill for some time past, and an examination was thought necessary.

C. W. James spent several days this week at Meadow Creek and vicinity in the interest of the creamery. C. W. is the general secretary of the Board of Trade.

A largely attended meeting of the Board of Trade was held last Thursday evening. The belief that only small meetings would be held through the summer months, has been laid aside. The interest is still there and evidently growing.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Presbyterian church will give a garden on Thursday evening, July 13th. No admission will be charged to the garden but, strawberry, ice cream and cake and coffee will be sold. The Claresholm band will be in attendance.

At the close of the Hoosier school last Friday, Mr. J. G. Fuller was presented with a watch fob and chain by the pupils. Mr. Fuller has had charge of this school for the past two terms and was held in very high esteem both by the pupils and parents. All were glad to hear that he will not return for another term. Mr. Fuller intends to enter some other line of business in the near future, but has not entirely made up his mind what it will be.

The plowing on the Demonstration Farm received a set back this week. The steam plow rig of E. O. Gallo suffered from a broken piston and had to be laid up for repairs. These having to come from Montana, will cause a delay of several days. The work is going ahead rapidly and in a few days we shall be able to know what the farm will look like.

Boost The Agricultural Fair

Boost for the Agricultural Fair to be held here on Aug. 9th and 10th. There is no better way in which to show your loyalty to the town and district than exhibits. Let everyone get busy and contribute. The prizes lists are out and can be obtained at Mr. J. R. Watt's office on Third avenue. Get one and look it over. You will find something which will interest you or your neighbor. The Fair will be a success if you do your part in boosting. If you have nothing to exhibit take an interest anyhow, and tell your friends about it. They may have something to show, and every little bit helps along. Don't stand idly by get out and boost. It is easy to say a good word to your acquaintances, and will much for your home place.

Meadow Creek District

Services next Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Meadow Creek school house, also anyone wishing their children baptised bring them along.

Services were well attended last Sunday.

A heavy hail storm swept over a part of the Meadow Creek district last Sunday destroying some gardens and damaging the early wheat considerably.

Mr. Maxwell brought his steam plow outfit home last Saturday after a long successful season, and said he was tired of plowing as the soil was so hard to get.

Grain is looking good since the rains.

Improving The Fair Grounds

A force of carpenters are busy this week putting up an exhibition building on the Fair grounds, and making general improvements in preparation for the coming Fair to be held here Aug. 9th and 10th. An exhibition building will fill a large space in the lots formerly used were rather unsatisfactory in more ways than one. Visitors to the Fair this year will be greatly pleased with the changes now being made.

Pioneer had grown up as a settler—ment after a spring of hard work.
The west of Mexico had been the scene of the life of the railroad Builders of the line got into trouble with the inhabitants and in revenge looted the station half a mile away from the camp. The men who would come to them. In this they were disappointed. The point was an isolated one and there was a deserted station at the camp.

Eastward and westward the single track of railroad drifted to summering in the desert. The sun beat down on the south dry wastes of sand glistening white under the burning sun and crowned with clumps of scrubby grea-stems and sagebrush. The horizon of hills. Cacti and mesquites fringed the monotony of the roll of pla-tina to the mountains.

Farther toward over the low sanction, which was built in the style of the old Spanish missions. The red roof and the white adobe walls shone by its walls. In the forbidding heat above a lizard scuttled merrily down an air current and hurried his flight over the lonely outpost of civilization.

Within the station a telegram sounded at the long distance chimes. "Terrill was at the ranch." The telegram was over for the moment. The eastern sun composed the only trains that traversed that section of the road each day, having arrived and departed at half past seven. The man who had the line to realize himself with the news of the world. But there was a dearth of exciting events such as his rare and delicate nature.

Up the trail toward the westward was a real uprising that was not taken place. Colonel Hart of Fort Grant had sent word to the commanding militia to give their latest earnest warning of a breathing spell.

"Well, I'm about even with the game," replied McKee, pulling from his pocket a hand of tobacco.

McKee had had an expensive service with McKee for poker, remunerated.

"You ought to give me another chance," said Buck. "I won away with all my money."

"Well, you're well off if you haven't won," answered McKee.

"You just lost it all," said Terrill.

"As you say, everybody knows you're a walkin' bank. But you got those thouzands in that inside your coat," said Buck, pointing his finger at the open waistband. Deep silence hung over his little person.

His eyes closed, his head dropped,
and after a short time he slept.

Trayce was approaching him now but not along the wire. Down an array of "victims" selected from the corporation, who would ride around the town of Florence and do business in the open market, the station was a two-story structure each leading a horse. They were Buck McKee and Bud Lane, who had ridden north from the town that morning with the desire to bring back to the old ranch, the Lazy K. They had climbed about the town, tiring their arrested limbs, and were about to take part in the train which was expected to bring Dick Lane's money.

McKee had come from the mouth of the draw. He was a tall, lithe and sinewy, loose at the throat. About his neck was a handkerchief. His riding pants were tucked into his boots with Spanish heels and leather spurs.

A Mexican hat with a band topped a head covered with curly hair. He was to be identified from his Cherokee mother.

Sure for the voltage soathing high in air, not a living soul was in sight.
With the sun high in the sky, McKee crept to the station door and peered blinking through the open door into the room. The chair open door to the dazzling light caused the shadowed exterior blinding him for a moment. He heard the heavy breathing of the sleeping and the draw.

Returning to the mouth of the ar-rayo, McKee motioned to his company to bring him the money. When this was done, the two others chose to dine and made every preparation for sudden flight. Lane and his friends remained while the train waited on a siding when McKee softly stole out through the open door to
"Old Man." Terrill's side.

McKee had come as a素人
to post vault his funds without pocket, the lock upon which was a huge safety pin. For further defense he carried a revolver and a pistol, both of which had easily reached. His quickness on the draw in the hour of need and his accuse of alibi made him a formidable antagonist.

Some men are born into the world to become its watchdogs, others to become its hounds. The human wolf is, as it were, selected by the human watchdog even when the dog is asleep. This was known in astounding as a man's birth, his guardians of society. Slim Hovey had a high type of the man's mind and the heart of the half breed.

"I can smell that you're grizzly," he sleek his hair with agin the wind. "He may be out of sight, out of mind, when most of us are in sight, out of mind."
Then I'll sell bar grasse, an' the next thing Bucky shows up with his in probable grin, "he'll always 'green' before me; as the sky pilot would say."

"Old Man" Terrill was of the watchdog breed. Whether warned or not and various schemes to tell McKee what now stood behind him with the muzzle of his revolver pressing into the middle of his back. Each was repeatedly, but never heard.

McKee, laughing merrily, saying,
"You ought to be so keekees to show what you carry in yer roll."

Terrill's eyes were wide. His shape was slowly fading.

over his prisoner's head and held it over his mouth slightly above blue, drawing in his feet as he did so.

One chance had come to him. He knew that if he failed death would risk his determination to take the risk in order to retrieve the slip he had made in admitting that he had been captured. He was running crazy and so to keep clean his record for trustiness, of which was so proud.

This last desperate resource was an admirable trial of will power, and had conquered others in the rough names of the corrals.

Again he turned to the right and further under McKee, who had to exert himself to hold his head beyond an upright position. Holding his revolver upright, he enveloped the half breed in his movements.

With a quick turn Terrill grasped McKee's left arm, jerking him upward on a stoop. With his right hand he grasped the back of his antagonist's neck, pulling his head downward, and with a single heave of his legs and back he sought to make McKee sit up again.

So suddenly and powerfully was the attack that he made no effort to escape the clutch of the desperate expressman.

His feet had left the floor and he was clinging to the air before his limbs were again free.

The two men fell in a heap on the floor. McKee on top. Dazed and shake-ing, he lay still, his head tilted to the right, his body bent over his arms.

He was a picture of exhaustion and despair. The sweat was on his face and his body was a mass of power and muscle.

McKee quickly unfastened the pin and seized the roll of paper. He was soon satisfied with his work and satisfaction to see that the most of it was in small bills and none of them was a large sum.

Carefully avoiding the fast forming pool of blood which was oozing from the hole in the dead man's head, he brought the money to his lips.

A glint showed him the coast was clear. Running across the tracks he joined Lane who was waiting for him behind the freight car with impatience.

They started at McKee's naming the exact amount he was carrying. He forgot his customary caution in his recklessness, but when he spoke again there was enough of half a dozen gipsy looth or half Indian. See like you know? I stoled out on my foot and threw down my eards 'fore I c'dn't git even a wad of money," he said.

"You just lost it all," said Terrill.

"As you say, everybody knows

even a wad of money," he said.

"You just lost it all," said Terrill.

"As you say, everybody knows
you're a walkin' bank. But you got those
thouzands in that inside your coat," said Buck, pointing his finger at the
hung over his little person.

His eyes closed, his head dropped,
and after a short time he slept.

but not along the wire. Down an array of "victims" selected from the
corporation, who would ride around
business in the open market, the
station was a two-story structure
each leading a horse. They were Buck
McKee and Bud Lane, who had ridden
north from the town that morning
climbed about the town, tiring their
part in the train which was expected to bring Dick Lane's money.

McKee had come from the mouth
of the draw. He was a tall, lithe

spurs.

topped a head covered with
curly hair. He was to be identified
from his Cherokee mother.

in air, not a living soul was in sight.
With the sun high in the sky, McKee
crept to the station door and peered
dazzling light caused the shadowed ex-
ing and the draw.

Returning to the mouth of the ar-
rayo, McKee motioned to his compa-
was done, the two others chose to
friends remained while the train
softly stole out through the open door to
"Old Man." Terrill's side.

to post vault his funds without pocket,
the lock upon which was a huge safety
pin. For further defense he carried a
draw in the hour of need and his ac-
antagonist.

Some men are born into the world
become its hounds. The human wolf is, as it were, selected by the human watchdog even when the
astounding as a man's birth, his
guardians of society. Slim Hovey
and the heart of the half breed.

"I can smell that you're grizzly," he
Then I'll sell bar grasse, an' the next
say."

the muzzle of his revolver pressing into
peatedly, but never heard.

McKee, laughing merrily, saying,
"You ought to be so keekees to
show what you carry in yer roll."

was slowly fading.

over his prisoner's head and held
blue, drawing in his feet as he did so.

One chance had come to him. He
risk in order to retrieve the slip he had
trustiness, of which was so proud.

names of the corrals.

Again he turned to the right and
further under McKee, who had to exert himself to hold his head beyond
an upright position. Holding his revolver
breed in his movements.

With a quick turn Terrill grasped
upward on a stoop. With his right hand he grasped the back of his
antagonist's neck, pulling his head
to make McKee sit up again.

So suddenly and powerfully was the at-
the clutch of the desperate expressman.

limbs were again free.

floor. McKee on top. Dazed and shake-
right, his body bent over his arms.

despair. The sweat was on his face
and muscle.

McKee quickly unfastened the pin
was soon satisfied with his work
and satisfaction to see that the most of it was in small bills and none of them
was a large sum.

brought the money to his lips.

clear. Running across the tracks he
behind the freight car with impatience.

forgot his customary caution in his
recklessness, but when he spoke again
there was enough of half a dozen
you know? I stoled out on my foot and
threw down my eards 'fore I c'dn't git
even a wad of money," he said.

"You just lost it all," said Terrill.

"As you say, everybody knows
you're a walkin' bank. But you got those

H. DUNCAN, EDITOR.

SALUTATORY

Mr. Duncan takes this, his first opportunity since taking over the Review to introduce himself to the citizens of Claresholm and district.

Having acquired the business previously owned by Mr. T. W. Quayle, he has been since May 31st the proprietor of this paper but was unable to assume direct charge until this date.

He is pleased that by the extreme courtesy of the former editor of this paper and the diligence of the staff the reputation of the Review has been maintained both in quality and promptness of delivery.

The present proprietor feels satisfied in the policy adopted and followed by Mr. Quayle for his predecessor having in his judgment but with the hopefulness of the neophyte he purposes to aspire to be coming in time a worthy successor.

As in the past, it shall be the aim of this paper, under the new management, to live up to the side of Right in all questions affecting the town of district and by the exercise of what ever influence may be at hand to direct our influence toward achieving only what is best for the material prosperity and moral integrity of town and district.

We hold, as always, that the mutual prosperity of the town and the country tributary to it depends upon the development of the agricultural resources of the district and the industrial progress of the town, side by side step by step. The interdependence of these two binds town and district in the bonds of a common good.

The foremost requirement to bring about each of these ends seems to us to be the bringing of the markets of the west nearer to the west.

Hence our campaign for increased railway facilities, improvement of local roads, securing an adequate grain car service, and the extension of rail and means of communication, will enlist our sympathies and co-operation.

We believe that the development of the agricultural possibilities of the town is necessary to growth and stability.

Every effort toward publicity is worthy of the best efforts of the citizens. We shall lend every assistance in our power to make the town's present attainment and possibilities known far and near and our voice shall be loudest in proclaiming the advantages of the town and district to every quarter from which good results can be expected.

We need not say more as our opportunities unlike the "Opportunity which knocks but once," come week by week and we desire to be judged by the results of our work rather than by protestations.

Personally Mr. Duncan has come to Claresholm with the purpose of becoming a citizen of this town and of identifying himself with every true interest of a good citizen. He expects to make mistakes but trusts that these mistakes will be, as your retiring editor expressed it in his valedictory, "mistakes of the head rather than the heart."

Aviator At Lethbridge

A number of Claresholm people with their wives and families are planning to take advantage of the excursion rates to Lethbridge on Friday July 14th, for the purpose of seeing Eugene Ely, the world famous aviator, and making a number of airplane flights. This day is the new Lethbridge fair grounds, in a Glen Curtis Biplane. This is to be the first real aviation exhibition to take place in Western Canada with the exception of several flights made last summer at Vancouver by Chas. K. Hamilton. One or two attempts at aerial flights have been made by amateurs in this country and other points, but at their best these could end in travelling only a short distance above terra firma no man so famous as Ely in the flying game has ever visited Western Canada before.

Among other daring feats, Ely performs the famous spiral dive in which he ascends several thousand feet, turns his plane around, drops his engine and shoots at a terrific speed to the ground in a cork screw dive. It was while performing this dangerous feat last Fall that Ralph Johnston and Arch. Honey, the two noted aviators, were plunged to their tragic deaths at Denver, Colo., and Los Angeles, Cal. Ely was in the air about fifteen minutes at the latter place when Honey fell.

Ely, it will be remembered, created quite a sensation, particularly in U.S. Military and Naval circles, by flying out to sea at San Francisco and landing on the deck of the U. S. battleship "Pennsylvania," rising from the latter again and flying back to land. He also performed a similar feat in the U. S. Cruiser "Pensacola" and when thirty miles from New York flew back to that city. At Salt Lake City recently he ascended 9,000 feet in the air and at Butte he performed for the first time the feat of passing over the summit of the main range of the Rocky Mountains.

Ely has made up his mind to quit the flying game in August next, having accumulated a fortune sufficient to keep him the rest of his days. It is said he will take advantage of the high altitude at Lethbridge and attempt to attain a higher point above sea level than has ever been reached by any man.

According to newspaper reports the people of Lethbridge are making preparations for the handling of the biggest crowd that ever assembled in their town. The Lethbridge Agricultural Society is taking advantage of the occasion to open the handsome fair grounds at Henderson Park and a grand public ball will be held in the new exhibition hall in the evening.

Wild Catters at Work

Grand Trunk Pacific takes legal action against private companies using its name.

Winnipeg, June 25.—The Grand Trunk Pacific has issued formal warning against real estate men who are offering in the name of the railway company to sell lots in bogus townsites along its lines in the western provinces, and has given notice that all such people will be prosecuted in the courts. The attorney general of the company states that action is now pending in the courts against six or seven concerns that are using the company's name, and that all wild-catters will be brought to justice in an endeavor to prevent the repetition of such misrepresentations as have already occurred in a number of cases.

The announcement is official, and states that the company itself has established all divisional points and stations, and that the sales will be made through its local office agents.

The authorities cite as an example of fraudulent advertising the exploitation of the townsite of Alter in the Calgary-Edmonton line of the Grand Trunk Pacific. This has been widely advertised as a virgin wild country and has had a hold at corresponding high figures. As a matter of fact, the actual divisional point is at Mirror, some six miles away from the townsite of Alter, and the railway company has no interest whatever in the townsite just named. Other towns in the same position have had Grand Trunk Pacific name has been used to sell lots in townsites miles away from any station, and without any authority whatsoever from the company. Action has been brought against the Grand Trunk Pacific Company of Vancouver, to restrain that concern from future trading under the name of the big corporation, and will shortly be brought against the Grand Trunk Land Company, which also is a private concern. Scores of real estate companies, employment agencies, hotels, livery stables, transferred stores and grocery establishments throughout the country use the name of the Grand Trunk Pacific, and it is President Hayes' intention to put a stop to all unauthorized use of the name Grand Trunk Pacific by any private concern.

Be Careful In Building That Home

POOR LUMBER means a cold cruise house. After the first year it gets that cheap, shabby look which makes it difficult to rent and difficult to sell. If you will buy it now, it will be good for you and you will be proud to show your friends and further, you will want to avoid the big fuel bills always necessary where low grade lumber is used. We make a specialty of high-grade lumber and "classy" material that you will want to use. We have built up the largest retail business in Western Canada by being very fussy as to grades and selling just a little better stuff than you can generally buy elsewhere at prices as low as those asked for the inferior kinds. If your contractor uses CROWN LUMBER it means that he is a man who wants the best of everything. It is the best recommendation the person could have!
